

Donald F. Duclow

January 11, 1946 - March 20, 2026

Donald F. Duclow

January 11, 1946 – March 20, 2026

Dr. Donald F. Duclow of Philadelphia, age 80. Beloved husband of Geraldine Hodzima Duclow and son of the late Harold Duclow and the late Josephine Schutzenhofer Duclow Baudler. Born and raised in Chicago, he studied English Literature and Philosophy at DePaul University, where he met his wife, Geraldine. After moving to Philadelphia, he received his Ph.D. in Philosophy from Bryn Mawr College in 1974. He taught Philosophy from 1974 to 2009 at Gwynedd Mercy University. He published and presented widely on the medieval Christian Neoplatonic tradition and was active in academic societies, especially the American Cusanus Society and the Renaissance Society of America. Someone of exceptional mind and spirit he was a committed and engaging teacher, a generous mentor and colleague, as well as a kind and loving friend. Donald cherished his role as godfather to Niels and was much loved by the entire Johnson family. He most enjoyed listening to classical music and savoring a good dark beer.

Tribute Wall

TI

“ Don and I were active in the American Cusanus Society and the Dekaware Valley Medieval Association. He also provided me with news of publications to include in the newsletter of ACS. He will be missed.

Thomas Izbicki - April 14 at 09:03 AM

MP

“ I've been blessed by having my cousin Don in my life, all my life. Memories come flooding back from childhood, Pal, his beloved dog and my first canine love. Trips to the art museum learning through him how to appreciate the talent of the artists. Books he gave me, concerts at Ravinia. His wedding to Geri. His wonderful laugh! Our recent visit when he and Geri came to my Mom's 100th birthday. Cartoons shared through email. I will miss him. He was a wonderful cousin and teacher.

Margaret M Prinzi - April 04 at 05:47 PM