“ Frannie was there to greet and support all of us "urban pioneers" when we moved to Spring Garden in the 1970s as she had grown up in the neighborhood. She was a great help to me and others involved with the Spring Garden Civic Association and served on the board. She was fun to be with and cared about me and my family. She was why I got a job at the Inquirer as she knew the editor who hired me and gave me a glowing recommendation. Because of Frannie's long service to The Philadelphia Inquirer she is entitled to a free death notice. I hope one will be published so more people will learn of her passing.

I worked with Frannie in the 70's. She was a lovely person and very personable. Although we lost touch over the years, I never ceased to think of her over the years. She will be missed.

Just found out today you passed away,sorry no one felt the need to notify the Ingrams. I know Pop and Gramie were there to meet you. And my Dad (your brother) We haven't talk in many years and for that is truly sad,but worse reading bout you in the paper. May you found comfort in Gods hands and love and happiness in seeing your parents and brother again..love your niece Karen Ingram
