“ Just came upon this obit for our old friend from the A&P offices at 30th Street.

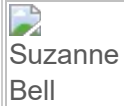

What fun we had with your Dad there. So many funny stories but first one that comes to mind is the Halloween we all came dressed as Bob Coyle. Black glasses with fake noses and here we were all typing and working at our desks with a pipe in our mouths! We laughed ourselves silly because every so often some one would come into the department and in they would come with same get up. Your Dad was a good sport with it all. My other sweet memory is when few years later I was leaving my. Job to raise my first child. Bib already left the company but one day he called in to wish me well. It meant so much to me. Guess he was keeping an eye on us all. I still gather all these years later with my lifetime friends I met In that office and Bob's name I mentioned in many an old story, May this sweet man Rest In Peace till we meet again.

“ Well Dad another Christmas has past and doesnt feel the same. My memories of you having boxes of Christmas decorations laid out all over the house for days. You worked yourself to the point of exhaustion but continued decorating day after day. After hanging the last decoration I watched as you sat on the couch staring at the work you had done then seeing a happy childish grin on his face. He said the decorations were "for the kids"but i could see they were for him as well. Christmas was my dad's favorite holiday. It was my loss not lending a helping hand. Well dad, Christmas hasn't been the same without you or your over the top decorations. Love Brian
